ABN AMRO – ODDO BHF B.V. and your personal data

This privacy statement sets out how we handle your personal data. You can be confident that we handle your personal data with due care.

Who is this privacy statement intended for?

Are you a client of ours or have you shown an interest in a specific product, for example by applying for one of such products? If so, we use your personal data and this privacy statement applies to you. If you visit our website, we might also use your personal data in those situations.

It is also possible that we process personal data relating to individuals who do not have a contract with us, for example when we record and use personal data relating to contact persons at companies to which we provide services, shareholders of these companies, or ultimate beneficial owners (UBOs) of these companies.

If you are one of these persons, then this privacy statement is intended for you too.

Our contact person for your questions about data protection:

We have a designated Privacy Officer. If you have any questions about this privacy statement, please send an e-mail to compliance@aa-ob.com.

Who is responsible for your personal data?

The controller of your personal data is ABN AMRO – ODDO BHF B.V. and ODDO BHF SCA.

What is personal data?

Personal data is information that says something about you. The best known examples are your name, address, email address, age and date of birth. Personal data also includes your bank account number, your phone number, your IP address and your national identification number. We may only use this personal data if this is permitted by law or if you give your consent for this.

Personal data relating to you that we obtained from others:

We may use the personal data that we request in relation to you, and in some situations we are in fact required to do this. We may also decide to use personal data obtained from other sources, such as:

- public and other registers that contain your personal data, such as Chamber of Commerce or UBO register;
- public sources such as newspapers, the internet and public sections of social media accounts; and
- data files from other parties that have collected personal data about you, such as external marketing firms or trade information companies.

When do we use your personal data?

Obviously, we may not request or use your personal data without good reason. We are allowed to do this only if the processing of personal data is based on one of the 'grounds' permitted by law. This means that we may only use your personal data for one or more of the following reasons:

Contracts:

We need your personal data for concluding and performing a contract, for example providing investment and/or research services. Are you the representative of your company and has your company concluded, or does it want to conclude, a contract with us? Or are you the contact person, shareholder, managing director or ultimate beneficial owner (UBO) of this company or one of our corporate clients? If so, we use your personal data for other reasons than the conclusion or performance of the contract.

Legal obligation:

The law lays down many rules that we have to comply with as an investment firm. These rules state that we have to record your personal data and occasionally provide it to others. The following are just some examples of the legal obligations we have to comply with:

- Under the Dutch Financial Supervision Act (Wet op het financieel toezicht - Wft), we have a statutory duty of care. This means that we have to use your personal data to obtain a good picture of your financial situation.
- We have to take steps to prevent and combat fraud, tax evasion, terrorist financing and money laundering. In that context, we ask you to prove your identity so that we know who you are. This is why we keep a copy of identity documents.
- We are required to keep your personal data owing to our obligations under various acts, such as the Dutch Civil Code or specific provisions of the Dutch Anti-Money Laundering and Anti-Terrorist Financing Act (Wet ter voorkoming van witwassen en financieren van terrorisme - Wwft) and the Dutch Bankruptcy Act (Faillissementswet).

Other organisations may occasionally ask investment firms to provide personal data. These organisations include the Dutch Tax and Customs Administration, the judicial authorities (financial fraud) and intelligence agencies (terrorism). In addition, we are sometimes required to share personal data with supervisory authorities, such as the Netherlands Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the European Central Bank (ECB), for instance when they carry out research into business processes or specific clients or groups of clients.

If the law or a supervisory authority stipulates that we must record or use your personal data, we are required to do this. In that case, it does not matter whether you are a client of ours or not. For example, as an investment firm we must check whether clients, and the representatives of clients (including corporate clients), are genuinely who they say they are. In addition, we must keep a photocopy of an identity document for each of our clients.

Legitimate interest of ABN AMRO – ODDO BHF B.V. or others:

We also have the right to use your personal data if we have a legitimate interest in doing so. In that case, we must be able to demonstrate that our interest in using your personal data outweighs your right to data protection. We therefore balance all the interests. Here are a few examples of when this might happen:

- We protect property and personal data belonging to you, to us and to others;
- We protect our own financial position, your interests and the interests of other clients (in the event of a bankruptcy, for example);
- We carry out fraud detection activities to help you and us avoid suffering losses as a result of fraud. In this context, we keep the financial transaction history of the payer and the payee;
- We keep you up-to-date on product changes and send you tips, offers and other relevant news by means of direct marketing; and
- We aim at organising ourselves efficiently. We centralise our systems, make use of other service providers, and conduct statistical and scientific research.

Even if you do not have a contract with us, we may still use your personal data either because this is necessary to ensure compliance with the law or on the basis of a legitimate interest. We will of course first check whether this is the case, for instance if your personal data is used for security purposes or for marketing purposes.

Using personal data with or without your consent:

In most cases, we use your personal data without obtaining your consent for this. This is permitted by law. We do this because:

- this is necessary because of the contract we have with you or that we intend to conclude with you;
- the law requires us to obtain, use or hold your personal data; and
- ABN AMRO – ODDO BHF B.V. or a third party has a legitimate interest in this.

Sometimes, however, we are required to ask you for your consent. Before you give consent, we recommend that you carefully read the information we provide concerning the use of your personal data.

If you have given consent and you want to withdraw this consent, you can do that very simply. For example, you can find information on how to do this in the form that explicitly requested your consent.

In which situations do we ask you for your consent? We will in any event ask you to give consent in the following situations:

1. Before we process special categories of your personal data. We do not use special categories of personal data without your consent unless the law states we are required or permitted to do this.
2. When we make use of automated decision-making and profiling and the law states that we require your consent for this.

Important information:

In certain situations we do not ask for your consent. This is the case if we require your personal data to comply with the law, if a legitimate interest exists, or if this is necessary in the context of the contract that we conclude with you. In such cases, however, you have a right to object.

What do we use your personal data for?

We use your personal data to help make our organisation and our services as effective, reliable and efficient as possible. This is done for the following six purposes:

1. Contract. To be able to enter into contracts with you and perform these contracts. If we do not have your personal data, we cannot submit your order for execution to ODDO BHF SCA.
2. Execution of your orders. ODDO BHF SCA executes your orders and distributes research material to you and therefore has a legitimate interest to receive your personal data. For that reason, we will, under certain conditions, provide your personal data to ODDO BHF SCA.
3. Research. We study possible trends, problems, root causes of errors and risks, for instance to check whether new rules are properly complied with. This helps us prevent complaints and losses.
4. Better or new products and services. Do our products still meet your wishes and expectations? We carry out research in this area, using your personal data. We study trends and use personal data with the aim of analysing and continuing to develop our products and services.

5. Marketing. You receive offers and news that is appropriate for you. That is why you receive as little advertising as possible for products you are probably not interested in or already have. In this context, we use personal data that we received from you, for instance because you requested information in the past or because you are already a client of ours. In this context, we may also use personal data that we received from other parties.
6. Security and the integrity of ABN AMRO – ODDO BHF B.V. and our sector. We are required to guarantee the security and integrity of the financial sector. We may therefore use your personal data to prevent or combat attempted or actual criminal or undesirable acts, such as fraud or terrorism. This enables us to guarantee the security and integrity of the financial sector, our organisation, our employees and you, as the client. We may also use your personal data for warning systems.
7. Social responsibility and legal obligations. As an investment firm, we play a key role in the society. We help to prevent terrorist financing, money laundering and fraud, for instance by reporting unusual transactions or by identifying and stopping potentially fraudulent transactions and verifying transactions with you if necessary. Public authorities also ask us to provide personal data when they want to investigate problems or criminal offences. In that context, we check whether they have good reason to do so. The finance sector is also one of the most regulated industries around. This means we have to comply with many rules. Besides European and Dutch rules, these rules also include the laws of other countries. We must therefore also record and keep personal data for this purpose, and sometimes also provide personal data to the competent authorities. We always check first whether this is permitted.

If you have not concluded a contract with us, we will not process your personal data in order to enter into and perform a contract with you. We may, however, use your personal data for other purposes, such as fraud detection. We always check first whether using your personal data for other purposes is permitted.

Other purposes:

We may use your personal data for other purposes than the purpose for which you supplied the personal data to us. In that case, the new purpose must be in line with the purpose for which you initially provided your personal data to us. The law refers to this principle as ‘compatible use of personal data’. The law does not specify exactly when a use is compatible, although it does provide guidance.

- Is this purpose clearly related to the purpose for which you initially provided the personal data? Is the new purpose appropriate to the initial purpose?
- How did we originally receive the personal data? Did we obtain the personal data directly from you or in another way?
- What kind of personal data is concerned exactly? Is the personal data in question considered sensitive to a greater or lesser degree?
- How would you be affected? Would you benefit, suffer or neither?
- What can we do to ensure the highest possible level of protection for your personal data? Examples include anonymisation and encryption.

Our group and your personal data:

We may share your personal data within our group for specific purposes. We may do this for internal administrative purposes, to improve our services to you, because we are required to do so by law, or to fulfil our duty of care.

ABN AMRO-ODDO BHF B.V. is also allowed to contact you with offers. In that context, it must be possible for you to tell that the undertaking is affiliated with our group, for instance because our name or logos are used, or because this is clearly stated on the website or in advertising.

Required personal data:

If we need personal data from you in order to conclude a contract with you, and you refuse to provide this data even though this is required by law, or these personal data are required for the contract, we will unfortunately not be able to enter into the contract with you. The required personal data is specified in the online forms and other forms we occasionally need you to complete.

Do you want us to remove your personal data from our systems?

We are unfortunately unable to remove required or other personal data that we need, for instance for the performance of the contract you have with us, or because we are required to keep this data by law or owing to a legitimate interest of ABN AMRO – ODDO BHF B.V.

Camera images, telephone calls, chat messages and video chat sessions:

If you contact us, we may capture images of you on camera. We do this for security purposes. We can also be contacted by telephone, by chat messages or in video chat sessions. We may also record your telephone calls, chat messages or video chat sessions with our advisers. We do this for the following purposes:

- a) to improve our services, for example so that we can coach or assess the performance of our employees,
- b) owing to a legal obligation,
- c) in order to be able to provide evidence, or
- d) to prevent fraud.

We handle video and audio recordings with due care. They are subject to the same rules as other personal data. You may exercise your rights, such as your right of access.

Other parties using your personal data:

There are situations in which we need to provide your personal data to other people and entities involved in the provision of our services. These are described below. If you provide an order to be executed by another financial institution, your personal data will also end up with that financial institution.

Our service providers

We work with other companies that help us provide services to you, for example for executing your orders. This is referred to as outsourcing. We are not permitted to pass your personal data on to them without good reason. There are rules that financial institutions must comply with in such situations. We carefully select these companies and clearly agree with them on how they are to handle your personal data. We remain responsible for your personal data. Sometimes we engage other parties that also provide services, such as lawyers and/or auditors. These parties bear their own responsibility for their use of your personal data.

Competent public authorities

Our supervisory authorities, the Dutch Authority for Financial Markets (AFM) and the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and other public authorities may ask us to provide personal data relating to you.

Use of your personal data for direct marketing purposes:

If you have previously purchased a product or service from us, we are keen to keep you informed about similar products and services we offer that are suited to your needs. This also applies if you are a visitor to our website. In order to do this properly, we use various sources. These are described below.

1. The personal data that we received from you in the context of the contract. When you visit our website, we may study how you use the website. We do this using your IP address.
2. The use of social media depends on the privacy settings you use on social media sites.
3. Other sources of information, including public sources. We will always check first whether a public or other source of information can be used reliably. Where applicable, we will check whether you, as a client, have consented to the use of personal data that comes from another party.

We use social media channels to publicise our organisation, products and/or services with clients, users of apps and visitors to the website. We do this so that we can offer useful, relevant information and/or answer questions we receive through social media. We use the internet and social media channels, such as Facebook and Twitter, for this purpose. In addition, we become involved in discussions on these channels and/or we reply to individual, relevant questions and comments from other participants. In such situations, it is of course possible that we record personal data. We will of course process this personal data in accordance with the terms of this privacy statement.

Profiling:

As an investment firm, we make use of profiling. Below we explain why we do this, and when.

Fraud prevention

We have a great deal of knowledge and experience in the area of fraud prevention. Unfortunately, we are faced with increasingly sophisticated forms of fraud. To the extent possible, we may take measures to prevent fraud, which may include the use of profiling. For security reasons, we are unable to provide details of the precise measures to be taken.

Unusual transactions

As an investment firm we have to comply with the Dutch Anti-Money Laundering and Anti-Terrorist Financing Act (Wet ter voorkoming van witwassen en financieren van terrorisme - Wwft). We therefore pay particular attention to unusual transactions and to transactions that - by their nature - result in a relatively high risk of money laundering. To do this, we need to create and maintain a risk profile of the client. If we suspect that a transaction is connected with money laundering or terrorist financing, we will report this to the authorities.

Duty of care and risk management

The supervisory authorities expect us to take faster action when clients are likely to get into financial difficulties. We may make use of profiling for this purpose too. In that case, we first make a list of the most common characteristics of clients who have found themselves in financial difficulties. These characteristics are combined to create the profile. We then check whether there are any clients who meet this profile. Finally, we determine what we can do to help these clients.

Direct marketing

We also use profiling to send you offers that are appropriate for you. We attempt to identify your areas of interest, based on a number of characteristics. We then look at specific aspects, such as your age category and whether you already have any other products from us. You will only be selected for a relevant marketing campaign if you meet a specific profile.

Obviously, we check the data protection rules to determine whether personal data may be used for that purpose. You may object to the creation of a personalised client profile for direct marketing purposes at any time. If you do not have a contract with us, we determine whether direct marketing is permitted in specific situations.

How do we ensure your personal data is secure?

We go to great lengths to ensure the highest possible level of protection for your personal data:

- We invest in our systems, procedures and people;
- We make sure that our working methods take into account the sensitive nature of your personal data; and
- We train our people how to keep your personal data safe and secure.

For security reasons, we are unable to provide details of the precise measures we take. But you may have come across some of such security measures, which include:

- Security of our online services;
- Security questions when you call us; and
- Requirements for sending confidential documents

Warning system used by financial institutions:

Financial institutions in the Netherlands have developed a warning system to protect the safety and security of ABN AMRO – ODDO BHF B.V. and the financial sector. This system allows the financial institutions to check whether a person:

- has ever committed fraud; and
- has tried to commit fraud.

Your personal data outside Europe

Your personal data might be processed outside Europe too. Additional rules apply in that case. This is because not all countries have the same strict data protection rules as we do in Europe.

Sharing personal data within our group

We may share your personal data outside Europe. Our sharing of personal data is governed by our global internal policy, the Binding Corporate Rules (BCRs). These have been approved by the Dutch Data Protection Authority (Dutch DPA).

Sharing personal data with other service providers

We may occasionally share your personal data with other companies or organisations outside Europe, for instance in the context of an outsourcing agreement. In that case, we ensure that either the country has an adequate level of protection, or that we have concluded separate agreements with those parties, and that these agreements comply with the European standard, such as the EU's model clauses.

How do we determine the period for which your personal data is stored?

We keep personal data in any event for as long as is necessary to achieve the purposes for which they have been collected.

The General Data Protection Regulation does not stipulate specific storage periods for personal data. Other legislation may specify minimum storage periods, however, which we must comply with. Such legislation includes the general requirement for businesses to keep records, as set out in the Dutch Civil Code, tax laws or laws governing financial enterprises in particular (such as the Dutch Financial Supervision Act).

Client data may be kept longer for various reasons, such as for risk management purposes, for security reasons or so that claims, investigations or legal proceedings can be handled properly.

Where possible, such client data is stored in an archive that is separate from our day-to-day systems.

What rights do you have, and what can you do?

Right to object

If we use your personal data based on a legitimate interest, you have the right to object. It may be the case that you do not want us to use your personal data for profiling. In certain situations, however, we are permitted to do this even if you object, for instance to prevent fraud, manage risks or investigate unusual transactions. In such situations, we will of course comply with the law.

You may object to the creation of a personalised client profile for direct marketing purposes at any time.

Right to object to processing for direct marketing purposes.

If you no longer want to receive offers for our products and services, you can unsubscribe at any time. All marketing messages include this possibility, and you can exercise this right easily by sending an e-mail to compliance@aa-ob.com.

Right of access, right to rectification, right to be forgotten, right to restriction

- You have the right to demand an overview of all personal data relating to you that we use.
- If your personal data is incorrect, you can ask us to change your personal data.
- You can ask us to erase your personal data at any time. We are not always able to do this, however, and do not always have to comply with your request, for example if we are required by law to keep your personal data for a longer period of time.
- You can also ask us to restrict the processing of your personal data on a temporary basis. This is possible in the following situations:
 - You think that your personal data is incorrect;
 - We use your personal data wrongfully;
 - If you submit an objection.

Right to data portability

Do you want to receive the personal data that you have provided to us and that we store by automated means for the purpose of performing a contract? We can arrange this, but only if we process your personal data on the basis of your consent or on the basis of the contract we concluded with you. This is referred to as data portability.

Please keep your personal data secure

- If you want to provide your personal data to any party, please check the purpose for which that party wants to use your personal data. For example, you can read the privacy statement on that party's website.
- If you want to receive your personal data, please make sure that your own equipment is adequately secure and has not been, or cannot be, hacked. Your financial information is very valuable for criminals.

If you want to receive the personal data we hold on you or arrange for it to be passed on to another party, you can submit a request to us through the 'Clients' rights' page on our website.

Do you have a complaint or want to ask a question?

Please write to compliance@aa-ob.com if you have any questions about this privacy statement. We will be happy to be of assistance. If you do not agree with the way in which we handle your personal data, you can lodge a complaint with the Data Protection Officer via privacy.office@nl.abnamro.com. You also have the right to file your complaint with the Dutch Data Protection Authority.

Do you want to read this privacy statement at another time?

You are allowed to download this privacy statement from the website.

Changes to the privacy statement

Changes to the law or our services and products may affect the way in which we use your personal data. If this happens, we will make changes to the privacy statement and notify you of these changes. We will publish any changes on our website.
